

FROM THE EDITOR-IN-CHIEF¹

Ladies and Gentlemen,

We're happy and proud to present to you issue 3/2024 of our journal. It features diverse texts by contributing authors from six countries, from Europe (Poland, Kosovo, Hungary), the Middle East (UAE), and Asia (India, Vietnam). Each article offers a dogmatic-legal layer overlaying a range of universal problems of law – including important axiological issues. This provides an opportunity for an unconstrained legal discussion across national borders and legal cultures. And it is something our readers find highly valuable.

This issue marks the start of a discussion on regulatory sandboxes – and KU Professor Waldemar Hoff, PhD, would like to encourage you to join it. We do hope that you will be willing to send us your analyses regarding the matter. We will be happy to feature your submissions in the coming issues.

We would also like to encourage you to take part in yet another conference co-organised by “The Critique of Law”. This is the 3rd nationwide conference from the series “New Directions and Challenges in Legal Scientific Communication”, this time organised under the name: Specificity of Research in Juridical Science vs. Journal Scoring. The conference will be held on 28 October 2024 (Monday) from 10:00 am to 3:20 pm on the MS Teams platform. In order to become a passive participant in the event, you'll need to register using the online form available here: <https://form.jotform.com/241582444318356>. The programme is available at: <https://www.kozminski.edu.pl/pl/wydarzenia/iii-ogolnopolska-konferencja-z-cyklu-nowe-kierunki-i-wyzwania-w-prawniczej-komunikacji-naukowej>. Modern legal scholarly communication is a matter definitely worth discussing, and the thoughts and opinions of our authors, reviewers, and readers are more than welcome.

I hope you find the new issue of our journal interesting and enjoyable.

You are most welcome to submit your texts.

Many thanks, as usual, to all the professors who review the submissions we receive. The review process involves the efforts of dozens of prominent scholars in the case of each issue.
