

Sources of Organizational Knowledge: Sound, Color, and Smell Et pour cela préfère l'Impair

Guest editors:

Luigi Maria Sicca (University of Naples Federico II and Scuola Superiore Meridionale)
Davide Bizjak (University of Naples Federico II)
Domenico Napolitano (Scuola Superiore Meridionale)
Daniela Pianezzi (University of Verona)

Info: tamarasisok@puntoorg.net

*La musique avant toute chose
Et pour cela préfère l'Impair*

*Music first and foremost! In your verse
Choose those meters odd of syllable*

This Call invites an open-ended critical inquiry into the sources of organizational knowledge, inviting diverse contributions from the international academic community to explore the tensions, uncertainties, and vulnerabilities of 'contemporaneity'. The latter is conceived here as the 'restlessness' inherent to every era—a notion captured well by the first two lines of Paul Verlaine's Art poétique (1999 [1882]) in the opening of this Call.

The subtitle of this Call underlines the aesthetic priority that frames and sustains this inquiry—an imperative to the 'uneven', to the 'odd' and dissonant. The subtitle is notably in French, a language that historically rose to prominence as the official medium of international diplomacy during the reign of Luigi XIV (1643-1715). French shaped key treaties, such as the Treaty of Westphalia (1648) and the Congress of Vienna (1815), gradually replacing Latin as the lingua franca of statecraft and international relations (Steyaert & Janssens, 2013; Vaara et al., 2005; Deslandes, 2022).

However, following the emergence of the United States as a dominant global power after the First and Second World Wars, English supplanted French as the principal language of influence, becoming synonymous with the ideals of mainstream managerial thought. This historical trajectory reflects a long-term pattern in which dominant and subordinate groups co-navigate moments of transition, experiencing together the restlessness and disquiet that typify such periods. The linguistic transition from French to English indeed marked the beginning of a new era, paving the way for the rise and increasing prominence of English-language critical inquiry literature (Hagen, 1999; Phillipson, 2003).

The significant influence of major American business schools in shaping global business culture—particularly since the mid-20th century, following the end of World War II—has been extensively documented (e.g., Barley & Kunda, 1992; Pfeffer, 1997). While these studies have contributed to a well-established paradigm, expanding the scope of inquiry to include [cross]cultural perspectives remain crucial. Such perspectives, while addressed in critical literature (e.g., Burrell & Morgan, 1979; Alvesson & Deetz, 2000; Alvesson & Kärreman, 2011; Cunliffe, 2011), demand a more in-depth exploration to better capture the multifaceted realities of organizational life, including the process of 'organizing outside organizations' (Czarniawska et al., 2023a, 2023b).

Key contributions to this expanded field include Whittington's (2006) articulation of the 'practice turn' in strategy, Gabriel's (1995) exploration of organizational storytelling, Clegg et al.'s (2006) critical analysis of power within organizations, Gagliardi's (1990, 2006) examination of symbolic artifacts, and Trethewey's (1999) invitation to explore the body as a central locus of work and organizational life (Pianezzi, 2025; Ashraf, 2025). These works underscore the complexity of organizational processes, highlighting their embedded and embodied dimensions and how they transcend conventional managerial narratives. Similarly, Morgan's (1986) metaphors and Weick's (1995) seminal sensemaking framework provide powerful tools for exploring archetypal constructs, revealing how symbols and meanings are created, embodied, and perpetuated within organizational contexts.

Building on these foundations, this Call for Papers invites contributions that explore three archetypal constructs as sources of organizational knowledge, which inherently transcend historical and geographical boundaries:

- Sound
- Color
- Smell

Each of these archetypes has been culturally and socially encoded—in various places and moments in time—becoming music, art, philosophy and poetry (Sicca, et al., 2025; Bancou, & de Vaujany, 2023; Martin, 2004; Riach, & Warren, 2015; Sicca, 2000). Accordingly, they open new avenues for scholarly investigation into the relationship between archetypes and organizing, and the processes by which they are also socially decoded.

Tracing the historical evolution of languages as cultural embodiments—languages that transform into social discourses and act as sources of organizational knowledge—this Call for Papers also focuses on how shared and institutionalized forms of communication emerge over time, exemplified most recently by managerial language, which has increasingly shaped academic discourse through the codification of archetypes. The Call also invites contributions that critically examine the role of the sound of languages, as well as the artistic archetypes—sound, color, and smell—and their social codifications, especially in terms of their intersection with organizational practices (Diedrich, 2023).

Central to this inquiry is the dynamic interaction between organizational researchers (who are at times also artists) and artists themselves—practitioners who master the grammar of their respective disciplines, whether as musicians, painters, or writers. Such interdisciplinary dialogues resonate with a body of influential scholarship, including Czarniawska's (1997) work on narrative practices, Becker's (1982) analysis of collective cultural production, and Schultz and Hernes' (2013) exploration of the temporal dimensions of artifacts. Strati's (1999) and Gagliardi's (1990, 2006) focus on the aesthetics of organizations further enrich this perspective. Collectively, these approaches offer a framework for understanding how cultural, aesthetic, and symbolic artifacts shape and reflect organizational life, particularly within contexts where boundaries are fluid and continually evolving (McCloskey, 2023). The sound of the language is thus worth exploration, as well as how songs in different languages, pronunciation and breathing (Berardi, 2019; Burnside, 2014) shape and perform social and artistic languages (Sicca, 1997), producing organizational discourses (Abrams, 2024).

Pursuing this dialogue between organizational scholars and artists offers a rigorous model of interdisciplinarity. It emphasizes the recognition of others' expertise (Longman, 2023), fostering fresh and often unconventional perspectives that challenge conventional binaries such as true / false in favor of plausible / not plausible arguments (Gherardi, 1994; Sicca, 2020; Pianezzi, Sicca, 2024; Benozzo et al., 2024). This robust interdisciplinary engagement demands prior intradisciplinary depth and a deconstruction process (Knights, 1997), both essential for meaningful collaboration (Sicca, 2022; Boncori et al., 2017).

Proposed Themes for Exploration

We suggest the following, but encourage contributions that extend beyond these boundaries:

- Aesthetics and Organizations: The influence of visual, musical, or literary elements on organizational dynamics
- Archetypes and Organizations: The symbolic transformation of sound, color, and smell into cultural forms
- Bodies and Organizations: Organizing bodies and bodies as the locus of organizational life
- How the sound of the words shapes and performs social languages, producing organizational discourses
- The Concept of Contemporaneity in Organizations: Organizations as spaces of instability and continuous evolution

- Alternative Epistemologies: Challenging traditional paradigms through interdisciplinary and decolonizing approaches
- Organizations and the Humanities: Reinterpreting texts from philosophy, literature, and poetry to uncover organizational phenomena
- Organizations as Social Performances: Insights from theater, dance, and the performing arts
- Organizations as Sonic and Visual Spaces: The roles of soundscapes and visual elements in shaping culture
- Languages as Archetypes in Organizations: How languages, as cultural embodiments, evolve into social and organizational knowledge systems, focusing on their archetypal elements—such as sound and rhythm—and their role in shaping shared communication and institutional frameworks
- Art and Management: Examining how art informs organizational learning and innovation
- Temporality, Spacing, and Organizing: The interplay of time, memory, spacing and projection in organizational practices

Expected Contributions

We welcome empirical, theoretical, and methodological submissions from a diverse range of disciplines, as well as multilingual contributions (accompanied by an English translation) that aim to evoke and celebrate 'the resonance of other languages.'

Innovative and interdisciplinary approaches are particularly encouraged, including:

- Case studies of arts and culture organizations
- Theoretical explorations using frameworks from the humanities or arts
- Comparative analyses of traditional and critical organizational paradigms
- Philosophical or aesthetic reflections on contemporary organizational challenges
- Media/Book/Art Review on the topics of the Call

References

- Abrams, R. (2024). Exhausted... . puntOorg International Journal, 1(1), onlinefirst, June, 13.
- Alvesson, M., & Deetz, S. (2000). Doing Critical Management Research. Sage Publications.
- Alvesson, M., & Kärreman, D. (2011). Decolonializing discourse: Critical reflections on organizational discourse analysis. Human Relations, 64(9), 1121-1146
- Ashraf, J. (2025). Corporeal Ethics for Feminist Work. puntOorg International Journal, 10(1), 111–114.
- Bancou, L., & de Vaujany, F.-X. (2023). Remote Work as Deleuzian Cinematography: Organizationality Beyond the Frame. puntOorg International Journal, 8(1), 96-113.
- Barley, S. R., & Kunda, G. (1992). Design and devotion: Surges of rational and normative ideologies of control in managerial discourse. Administrative Science Quarterly, 37(3), 363-399.
- Becker, H. S. (1982). Art Worlds. University of California Press.
- Benozzo, A., Bizjak, D., Pianezzi, D., & Sicca, L.M. (2024). Nomads, thresholds, and leaves: Queer entanglements within the AcademicConferenceMachine, Gender, Work & Organization, (31)5: 2264-2285.
- Berardi, F.B. (2019). Breathing. Chaos and Poetry. MIT Press.
- Boncori, I., Mollona, E., & Sicca, L.M. (2017). The puntOorg International Journal Project, puntOorg International Journal, (2)2: 68-77.
- Burnside, J. (2014). All One Breath. Jonathan Cape.
- Burrell, G., & Morgan, G. (1979). Sociological Paradigms and Organizational Analysis. Heinemann.

- Clegg, S. R., Courpasson, D., & Phillips, N. (2006). Power and organizations. Organization, 13(6), 675-693.
- Cunliffe, A. L. (2011). Crafting qualitative research: Morgan and Smircich 30 years on. Organization, 18(1), 27-37.
- Czarniawska, B. (1997). Narrating the Organization: Dramas of Institutional Identity. University of Chicago Press.
- Czarniawska, B., Miscione, G., Raviola, E., Alcadipani Da Silveira, R., & Tarim, E. (2023a). Organising Outside Organisations – Part I. puntOorg International Journal, 8(1), 1-2.
- Czarniawska, B., Raviola, E., Alcadipani Da Silveira, R., & Tarim, E. (2023b). Organising Outside Organizations – Part II. puntOorg International Journal, 8(2), 134-135.
- Deslandes, G. (2022). Untranslatable management, or the choice of idiom, in Kostera, M. How to Write Differently: A Quest for Meaningful Academic Writing, Elgar, 67-79.
- Diedrich, A. (2023). Organising Integration Support for Recent Immigrants in Sweden as a Spectacle: Practices and Consequences. puntOorg International Journal, 8(1), 78-95.
- Gabriel, Y. (1995). The unmanaged organization: Stories, fantasies, and subjectivity. Human Relations, 48(9), 1071-1089.
- Gagliardi, P. (1990). Symbols and Artifacts: Views of the Corporate Landscape. Aldine de Gruyter.
- Gagliardi, P. (2006). 'Exploring the Aesthetic Side of Organizational Life' in The Sage Handbook of Organizations Studies. Stewart R. Clegg, Cynthia Hardy, Thomas B. Lawrence, and Walter R. Nord (eds). Sage.
- Gherardi, S. (1994). The gender we think, the gender we do in our everyday organizational lives, Human Relations, 47(6), 591-610.
- Hatch, M. J. (1993). The dynamics of organizational culture. Academy of Management Review, 18(4), 657-693.
- Hagen, S. (1999). Business Communication Across Borders: A Study of Language Use and Practice in European Companies. Language and Intercultural Communication, 1(2), 96-110.
- Knights, D. (1997). Organization theory in the age of deconstruction: Dualism, gender and postmodernism revisited. Organization Studies (18)1: 1-19.
- Longman, R. (2023). Organizationality and alterity: looking for signs of organizing in an online community of practice. puntOorg International Journal, 8(2), 222-248.
- Martin, J. (2004). The smell of home. Organization & environment, 17(2), 244-253.
- Martin, P. Y. (2002). Sensations, bodies, and the 'spirit of a place': Aesthetics in residential organizations for the elderly. Human Relations, 55(7), 861-885.
- McCloskey, D. (2023). Let's Get Organized: The Missing Spontaneous Action in Organization Theory. puntOorg International Journal, 8(1), 114-123.
- Morgan, G. (1986). Images of Organization. Sage Publications.
- Pfeffer, J. (1997). New Directions for Organization Theory: Problems and Prospects. Oxford University Press.
- Phillipson, R. (2003). English-Only Europe? Challenging Language Policy. Routledge.
- Pianezzi, D. (2025). Corporeal Ethics for Feminist Work. (Dis)organized Bodies. Bristol University Press.
- Pianezzi, D., & Sicca, L.M. (2024). Engaging in a sui generis dialogue with Adriana Cavarero and Olivia Guaraldo, Organization, First published online November 19.
- Riach, K., & Warren, S. (2015). Smell organization: Bodies and corporeal porosity in office work. Human Relations, 68(5), 789-809.

Schultz, M., & Hernes, T. (2013). A temporal perspective on organizational identity. Organization Science, 24(1), 1-21.

Sicca, L. M. (1997). Management of Opera Houses: The Italian Experience of the “Enti Autonomi”, The International Journal of Cultural Policy, 4(1), 201-224

Sicca, L. M. (2000). Chamber Music and Organization Theory: Some Typical Organizational Phenomena Seen Under The Microscope, Studies in Cultures Organizations and Societies [Culture and Organization], 6(2), 145-169.

Sicca, L. M. (2020). O l'impresa, o la vita. Storie organizzative ed epiche. Egea.

Sicca, L. M. (2022). Towards a Critical Intradisciplinary and Interdisciplinary Approach in Humanities. puntOorg International Journal, 7(1), 1-5.

Sicca, L. M., Bizjak, D. & Napolitano, D. (2024). Letting things happen: John Cage as a giant of organizational studies, Tamara: Journal of Critical Inquiry, (20)1.

Steyaert, C., & Janssens, M. (2013). Multilingual scholarship and the paradox of translation and language in management and organization studies. Organization, 20(1), 131-142.

Strati, A. (1999). Organization and Aesthetics. Sage Publications.

Trethewey, A. (1999). Disciplined bodies: Women's embodied identities at work. Organization Studies, 20(3), 423-450.

Vaara, E., Tienari, J., Piekkari, R., & Sääntti, R. (2005). Language and the circuits of power in a merging multinational corporation. Journal of Management Studies, 42(3), 595-623.

Verlaine, P. (1999 [1882]), Ars Poetica, in One Hundred and One Poems by Paul Verlaine: A Bilingual Edition, translated by Norman R. Shapiro, Chicago, The University of Chicago Press [original edition Art Poétique, in Paris Moderne].

Weick, K. E. (1995). Sensemaking in Organizations. Sage Publications.

Whittington, R. (2006). Completing the practice turn in strategy research. Organization Studies, 27(5), 613-634.

Target Audience

This Call seeks contributions from scholars, researchers, and doctoral candidates interested in the intersections of organizations, culture, and contemporaneity. Contributions should foster an open and dynamic dialogue, advancing the academic discourse in organizational studies.

This Call aims to establish a platform for innovative and rigorous explorations, inviting contributions that deepen our understanding of organizational knowledge through the lens of sound, color, and smell.

Provisional Timeline

- April 1, 2025: Stream dedicated to the launch of the SI, held as part of the workshop on 'Poetry and Management' organized by Tamara: Journal of Critical Organization Inquiry
- Promotion through the official website and all social media channels of Tamara: Journal of Critical Organization Inquiry and the puntOorg International Research Network
- June-July 2025, Promotion during academic conferences (e.g., EURAM, EGOS, SCOS, etc.).
- January 19, 2026, Abstract Deadline
- March 4, 2026, Accepted abstract
- April 4, 2026, Online Workshop: Meet the guest editors
- June-July 2026, Relaunch of the Call for Papers Promotion during academic conferences season (e.g., EURAM, EGOS, SCOS, etc.)

 The acceptance of an abstract does not guarantee the acceptance of the corresponding full paper. Similarly, full papers may be submitted and considered even without a prior abstract submission.

Tamara: Journal of Critical Organization Inquiry – Call for Papers

Sources of Organizational Knowledge: Sound, Color, and Smell
Et pour cela préfère l'Impair

- August 28, 2026, Full Paper Deadline
- Mid, 2027, Response to the First Round of Peer Review
- Late 2027, End of the Peer Review Process
- 2028, expected published online

Should you require any further information, please feel free to reach out to the guest editors at the following address: tamarasisok@puntoorg.net.